Walter M. Shaub, Jr., was the Director of the U.S. Office of Government Ethics from January 8, 2013 until he resigned effective July 19, 2017, a decision he explained in an Op-Ed in the New York Times.

Mr. Shaub now serves as Senior Director for Ethics at the Campaign Legal Center in Washington, D.C, a nonpartisan organization that is home to the nation's premier election law experts and is dedicated to protecting the fundamental right of all Americans to participate in the political process. Mr. Shaub has been a vocal critic of the Trump Administration's record on ethics, including filing an ethics complaint against presidential counselor Kellyanne Conway for violating the Hatch Act's prohibition against executive branch employees using their government positions to influence elections.
